Do you have lower or upper limb absence or amputation?

Would you like to help educate prosthetists of the future?

The National Centre for Prosthetics and Orthotics, University of Strathclyde is a world class leader in Prosthetics and Orthotics education. The department requires volunteer patients to assist with teaching of lower and upper limb prosthetics. During these courses, undergraduate students learn about the professional, clinical and technical aspects of patient assessment, casting, socket fitting and alignment. Attendance is at our Glasgow city centre premises in Scotland over a number of morning or afternoon sessions and occasionally for full day sessions. The modules usually run from February - April and September - November each year depending on the level of limb absence being taught.

You will be reimbursed for reasonable travel costs to and from the department for each session and expenses will be paid for your participation. Lunch is provided on full day participation and refreshments are available throughout.

You are under no obligation to take part and as a volunteer can withdraw at any time and without giving a reason. Whether you choose to participate or not in these sessions will in no way affect your on-going prosthetic care.

If you have lower or upper limb absence and might be able to help, or would like some more information contact the NCPO administration team by phone on 0141 548 3298 or email linda.gilmour@strath.ac.uk
